DEPARTMENT OF CLASSICAL & MODERN LANGUAGES

"Studying Spanish in the Department of Classical & Modern Languages at Truman afforded me countless opportunities for personal, academic, and professional growth. During my time there, I benefitted from study abroad, internships, professional and freelance employment in my field, volunteerism, extracurricular activities, and so much more!"

Emma Merrigan, Class of 2014
Pursued at Truman: Spanish
Currently pursuing: Graduate studies in Spanish Literature Washington University
Hometown: St. Joseph, Missouri

Languages

Immerse yourself in a broad range of languages:

Ancient Greek	French	Japanese	Russian
Arabic	German	Latin	Spanish
Chinese	Italian	Portuguese	Swahili

Programs

- Bachelor of Arts (BA) degrees in Classics, French, German, Romance Languages, Spanish and Russian.
- Approximately 60% of Classical & Modern Language (CML) majors earn a double major—in another language, Business, Political Science, Biology, Mathematics, Psychology, Communications, Communication Disorders and many other fields.
- A CML major is a great complement to pre-professional programs, especially in education, medicine, health sciences, and law.
- Pursue a minor in French, French in Translation, German, Greek, Latin, Spanish, Spanish for the Professions (Health and Business), and Russian Studies.
- Interdisciplinary minors are offered in Asian Studies, Classical Studies and Italian Studies.
- Earn an interdisciplinary major in Chinese Studies, Italian Studies or Japanese Studies.
- Master of Arts in Education degrees are offered in French and Spanish.

Faculty

- Experienced faculty teach all courses at all levels.
- 36 are full-time faculty members, 86% of whom hold a PhD in their field
- Many are native speakers from places like Argentina, Austria, China, Colombia, France, Germany, Japan, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Senegal, and Spain.
- CML faculty are leaders in national and regional language organizations.
- As published authors of books, journal articles, poems, and plays, faculty serve as supportive role models.

In The Classroom

- Study of a foreign language is a priority on Truman's campus: approximately 1/3 of Truman students are enrolled in a foreign language class at any given time.
- Class sizes for advanced courses range from 5-25 students.

Beyond The Classroom

- Live, eat and breathe language? Choose to room in the Romance Languages living-learning community in Missouri Hall.
- Experience service-learning opportunities with Spanish and French-speaking immigrants in the local community.

"The national convention for the Classical Studies honorary society, Eta Sigma Phi, is a fantastic outlet for students of Ancient Greek and Latin to present their research and meet Classics students from other universities. It allows our students to expand their Truman education beyond the confines of the traditional classroom and have a transformative, high-impact educational experience."

Amy Norgard
Assistant Professor of Classics

- Participate in poetry readings and theater performances in the original language.
- Have a leadership role in a departmental student organization or honor society.
- Try an immersion weekend for French and Spanish students.
- Join a conversation table in the residence halls and off-campus.

Service Learning

- Taiwan-Connect (teaching English to students in Taiwan via Skype)
- Latin instruction in local schools
- English instruction to the Congolese immigrant community
