Dr. David R. Russell to Give Winter Commencement Address

Dr. David R. Russell, commissioner of higher education for the state of Missouri, will give the commencement address during graduation ceremonies Dec. 18.

Missouri's Coordinating Board for Higher Education named Russell as interim commissioner July 1, 2010 and appointed him as the permanent commissioner earlier this month. He most recently served as senior associate vice president and chief of staff for the University of Missouri System, where he was liaison between the university and the Coordinating Board for Higher Education and its administrative arm, the Missouri Department of Higher Education.

Russell worked in the University of Missouri System for 19 years, first as associate director of university relations, assuming even greater responsibility for communications, strategic planning and public policy positions. He served as director of university relations and chief of staff before becoming senior associate vice president, where he worked with the president and all four university campuses to integrate finance and administration, human resources, general counsel, government relations, information technology, communications, and academic and student affairs.

Prior to his tenure at the University of Missouri System, Russell served in the United States Army as a commissioned officer, retiring in 1991 as a Lieutenant Colonel after a 22-year career, including assignments in media relations at the Pentagon and as director of public affairs at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

Russell obtained a bachelor's degree in education from Henderson State University, a master's degree in communications from Graduation ceremonies are scheduled for 11 a.m. Dec. 18 in Pershing Arena.

Nesbitt Named to Coaches Hall of Fame

Truman Head Football Coach Gregg Nesbitt was inducted into the Missouri High School Football Coaches Association Hall of Fame Dec. 3.

The 1980 Truman graduate was the head coach at both Columbia-Hickman and Hannibal high schools and just completed his first year as coach of the Bulldogs.

Nesbitt began his high school coaching career in his native Hannibal in 1984 where he led the Pirates to three straight state playoff appearances from 1987-1989. In 1990, Nesbitt returned to Truman to join Eric Holm's staff as linebackers coach and defensive coordinator of the Bulldogs.

During his three-year stint, Truman was 23-9 and made NCAA Division II playoff appearances in 1990 and 1992.

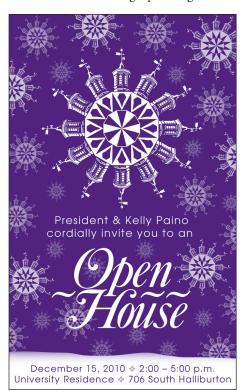

Nesbitt left Truman in 1993 to take over one of the state's premier high school programs at Hickman. Over the next 13 seasons, the Kewpies racked up six Missouri Class Six playoff appearances and the 2004 state championship.

He was named the 2004 Missouri Coach of the Year by the Associated Press, the National Federation of High School Sports Regional Coach of the Year and was a nominee for the NFHS National Coach of the Year award.

In 2006, Nesbitt moved back to the collegiate ranks as defensive coordinator and secondary coach at Central Methodist University and moved the next year to the University of Central Missouri in Warrensburg.

In December 2009, he returned to Truman to lead the Bulldogs.

The Missouri High School Football Coaches Association Hall of Fame was founded in 1992 and currently features 112 inductees.

Master of Arts in Leadership

Truman will begin offering courses in the new Master of Arts in Leadership graduate program in Spring 2011.

The program includes a solid theoretical foundation in personal and organizational leadership, plus experiential learning consisting of simulations, case studies and internships that will enable students to progress from the study of leadership to its application and practice.

Graduates will have completed a specialization area designed to advance the individual's personal leadership goals.

For more information, see http://gradstudies.truman.edu/areasofstudy/Leadership.asp, e-mail cyoung@truman.edu or call 785.4109.

Program Offers Internships Worldwide

Por nearly a decade, Truman has given Master of Arts in Education students the chance to fulfill their internship requirements at one of several locations throughout the world.

A partnership with the Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA) allows MAE students to complete their internships by teaching children of service men and women on military bases DoDEA operates a worldwide school system known as the Department of Defense Dependents School, or DoDDS. In addition to stateside schools, DoDDS operates schools in Spain, Italy, Germany, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, Turkey, Korea, Guam, Cuba and Japan.

Truman students who intern with DoDDS are afforded a unique study abroad opportunity.

"Interns are still able to work with American children in a classroom setting very similar to what they would find in the states," said Laura E. Nickelson, director of field experiences for the Truman Department of Education. "Additionally, they are exposed to dealing and working with interesting dynamics and challenges of deployment, governmental accountability, politics and a variety of other social and cultural issues."

Andrew Dager ('06) interned at Sembach, Germany, a small annex of Ramstein Air Base.

"It was certainly a change in environment, but I really enjoyed living on base," he said.

At Sembach, Dager lived within walking distance of the base commissary, restaurants, the library, a gym and the middle school where he did his internship. He also credits the men and women in the military with making the transition easy for him.

"The people on base were exceptional to newcomers. Being in the military, they really seem to understand how it feels to travel so far from family and friends," he said.

During the week, Dager's experience was like any other MAE intern. He was responsible for teaching courses, processing paperwork, communicating with parents of students and planning for upcoming classes. On the weekends, however, he was able to take a train to various locations throughout Europe such as Paris and other bases hosting DoDDS interns.

Regardless of where MAE students do their DoDDS internships, they remain in contact with Truman faculty.

"Students participating in this internship are still provided with intensive faculty support from the University in many avenues, including site supervision throughout the experience in order to monitor their progress and growth as an educator," Nickelson said. During the semester-long internship, students receive a minimum of three site visits from Truman faculty members. That commitment to education has earned the University a reputation and is one reason why several schools in the DoDDS program will accept only Truman interns

In addition to receiving Truman support, interns also make connections with teachers already on base. Dager credits his host teacher and school principal for making the experience especially rewarding.

"Not only did my host teacher ensure I had everything needed to succeed, she made sure I got the opportunity to learn all of the skills I would need to be a first-year teacher," Dager said.

In fact, Dager is still in contact with his host teacher and principal and recently accepted a full-time position with the DoDEA. He is again teaching in Germany, this time in the Kaiserslautern District.

"The faculty, administration, facilities and professional support of the DoDEA are all top-notch," he said. "The experience of being a teacher just like you would in the states, but living in the middle of a foreign country, was just too exceptional to turn down."

The DoDDS internship was implemented at Truman about 10 years ago by Sam Minner, dean of the School of Health Sciences and Education, and Jeff Gall, MAE social science faculty member. Since the first group of three students completed their DoDDS internship in Fall 2001, Truman has seen 98 students participate, with placements in locations including Italy, Japan and Germany. Internships are offered both in the fall and spring semesters, and Truman usually sends 8-12 students to the DoDDS program in an academic year.

While there is not a cap on the number of students who are accepted for DoDDS internships, there is a formal application, interview and preparation process before a student can be accepted into the program. Students do not need to know a foreign language to apply.

The application process occurs approximately a year in advance of the actual internship experience. Applications for Fall 2011 are due Jan. 15. Students interested in interning in Spring 2012 should have applications turned in by April 15. Applications can be picked up in Violette Hall 2316.

DoDDS informational meetings take place each semester. Additional information can be obtained by contacting Nickelson at lenickel@truman.edu or 785.4399, or by visiting the Field Experience Office located in Violette Hall 2310.

Students Bring Great Speeches to Life

Similar to the movie "Night at the Museum," great speeches from 20th century history will come to life Dec. 8 in the Barnett Hall atrium.

Approximately 20 students from the COMM 270 class will be portraying speakers in a program scheduled from noon to 1:30 p.m. At any given point, about half of the students will be in character sharing their speeches.

The speeches will portray Midwestern speakers from the Top 100 Great Speeches of the 20th Century, available online at http://americanrhetoric.com.

Members of the public are invited to explore the "museum" at their own pace. Each presentation is expected to last approximately five minutes. Students will share brief insights about the speakers and the rhetorical situation in addition to performing excerpts from the speeches.

Light refreshments will be served at the event. Those attending are encouraged to vote for the best portrayal based on dress and delivery of quotes, as well as understanding of speaker, rhetorical situation and rhetorical splendor.

This event is sponsored by the Communication Club (NCASC) and Toastmasters International. NCASC is committed to enriching the lives of undergraduate communication majors and minors by promoting the study and application of communication principles through educational and social functions. Toastmasters International is open to all students, regardless of major, as well as members of the community interested in improving speechmaking.

NOTABLES

Mark Appold, professor of philosophy and religion, appeared in the Nov. 19 archaeology series on the International History Channel in an interview with Israeli filmmaker Simcha Jacobovici. Filmed on site at biblical Bethsaida in the Golan, the interview focused on Bethsaida as the cradle of early Christianity. The exchange was triggered by Appold's journal article about the significance of a first century cross, which was incised on a large shard of an ancient wine jar discovered at Bethsaida.

Elaine McDuff, associate professor of sociology, has been elected to the Board of Directors of the Midwest Sociological Society as the representative for the state of Missouri. Founded in 1936, the Midwest Sociological Society is a professional organization of academic and applied sociologists as well as students of the discipline. Nearly 1,200 scholars, students and practicing sociologists in universities, government and business belong to the organization. The MSS encompasses nine states: Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Kansas, South Dakota and North Dakota; however, more than one-third of the members are from other parts of the nation and the world. McDuff will serve a term of three years, beginning at the Annual Meeting, March 24-27, 2011 in St. Louis, Mo.

Betty Louise McLane-Iles, professor of French, and George Barlow, a local award-winning photographer, have been notified by Xlibris Press of Bloomington, Ind., that their first-ever commissioned respective illustrated portraits and photographs have been published for the cover of McLane-Iles' husband Larry Iles' first book, "The Progressive Left Centre Animal Lover Legacy: Expansive Historical Saga of Radicals George Greenwood and Vera Terrington." There will be a book signing and talk at 2 p.m. Jan. 20 in the University Bookstore.

Sherri Addis Palmer, professor of psychology, 2009 alumnus K. Lee Raby and 2010 alumna Jaimie O'Gara have been notified that their submission, "Parent-Infant Relationships Within the Family System: Fluctuations in Interactions Across Dyadic and Triadic Social Contexts," was accepted for presentation at the 2011 Meeting of the Society for Research in Child Development, to take place in Montreal, Quebec, Canada. Raby is currently pursuing a Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota and O'Gara is pursuing a MSW at the University of Nebraska-Omaha.

Peter Ramberg, associate professor of history of science, was visiting professor at the Organic Chemistry Institute of the University of Zürich in Switzerland in September and October. He taught a four-week special course on the history of chemistry entitled "Atoms, Elements, Structure, and Mechanism. Lectures on the History of Chemistry."
