LIVING ON CAMPUS WITH YOUR AMERICAN ROOMMATE

GENERAL TIPS:

Talk to your roommate: Don't be shy! It may seem very awkward at first, but it is important to try and understand each other as much as possible. Fill out the Roommate Agreement Form early so both of you understand expectations.

Visitors: Let your roommate know when you are ok with visitors and when you are not. Ask them if they have problems with your friends, classmates or significant other visiting at certain times. Having late visitors could be viewed as disrespectful.

Keeping the room in order: Set up a cleaning schedule with your roommate(s) and suite mates (if you have them). This is especially important in regards to bathrooms.

Shared Space: Americans really like their personal space. Talk to your roommate what items and spaces are shared and what is personal. It is very important not to touch someone else's things unless you know they are ok with it.

Things Americans are weird about - Smells and hygiene:

Natural Body Odor: Americans believe that natural body odors are a sign of poor hygiene and lack of cleanliness. It is expected to shower every day and use a lot of deodorant. While you will meet some people who do not shower every day, most people will wear deodorant all the time. To do otherwise is considered non-hygienic. This is a common problem between international students and American roommates.

Perfume/cologne/body spray: Even though natural body odors are not acceptable in the U.S., Americans generally do not wear strong perfumes either. While light body sprays are fairly normal, some people are allergic to stronger perfumes.

Smoking: Smoking is not as common in the United States as it is in other countries. Like strong perfume, many people are allergic to the odor, so it is not polite to smoke in closed spaces. Smoking is illegal in most places in the United States. You should not expect to smoke in your residence or within 50 feet of any campus building.

LIVING ON CAMPUS WITH YOUR AMERICAN ROOMMATE

How to discuss a problem with your roommate:

- Different cultures handle conflict differently. In some cultures, you can discreetly imply there is a problem and the other person will understand. In some cultures, you must tell the person very directly that there is a problem.
- Likely, you and your roommate will have different styles of dealing with conflict. If they do not seem to understand when you imply there is a problem, you might need to be more direct.
- If you are confused, talk to your SA (this is a person who helps students on their floor)
- Be willing to compromise. Conflicts are best resolved when all parties work together to reach a favorable outcome. But also stand up for yourself if you think you are being treated unfairly.
- If you have something on your mind, listen first and then talk about your situation. You are already communicating, keep it going.

HOW TO HANDLE IT WHEN YOU ARE CONFRONTED ABOUT AN ISSUE:

- Don't think it means you have done something terrible. Americans may be more or less direct than you are used to. The person probably doesn't mean to embarrass you. They are likely just trying to show how to do better.
- Be willing to listen.
- Don't automatically start defending yourself. It took a lot of courage to talk to you about the situation. Be open and understanding of what your friend/ roommate has to say.
- Don't make excuses or pass the blame
- Be willing to compromise. Conflicts are best resolved when all parties work together to reach a favorable outcome.
- If you have something on your mind, listen first and then talk about your situation. You are already communicating, keep it going.

EATING ON CAMPUS

- You will choose your meal plan and sign your housing contract on Truview.truman.edu
- Email Laurie Hall at lrhall@truman.edu if you need to change it later.

LIVING ON CAMPUS

- Remember that housing contracts are binding. If you want to break your housing contract, it will cost you a lot of money. Exchange students who are here for one semester should choose a one year housing contract. These are the only students who are not required to reside in the residence halls for the full duration of their contract.

- Transfer students are welcome to live on campus, but are not required to do so.

- Think about how often you plan to eat in the dining halls before choosing your meal plan. There are not a lot of restaurants in Kirksville. But if you choose 20 meals per week in your dining hall, but do not use all of them, you will not receive a refund for the meals you don't use.
